SAN FRANCISCO—The San Francisco Symphony and Music Director Esa-Pekka Salonen release Collaborative Partner Nico Muhly’s Throughline on SFS Media, available now wherever music is streamed and downloaded. Commissioned by the San Francisco Symphony and recorded September 22–25, 2020 in Davies Symphony Hall and around the globe, Throughline received its world premiere as part of the digital concert event “Throughline: San Francisco Symphony—From Hall to Home,” which was first broadcast on Bay Area public television and streamed online November 14, 2020. Muhly’s “work of remarkable expressive power” (San Francisco Chronicle) offers a kinetic and seamlessly collaborative musical experience that captures the vibrant individualism of its performers. Throughline is available now in 24-bit/96kHz studio master-quality as a digital download and streaming via all major retailers worldwide. For more information, program notes, and performance video footage, visit sfsymphony.org/nicomuhly, and check out this promotional video clip to get some insights about Throughline from composer Nico Muhly himself.

In composing Throughline, intended specifically for the digital medium, Nico Muhly worked within the global health restrictions posed by the COVID-19 pandemic to create a work that is one-of-a-kind. Muhly shares, “Throughline is one of the more challenging pieces I’ve written, not just as a piece of musical logistics but also as a piece of technical, practical logistics. Compositionally, the challenge was to create something with an even flow that takes advantage of—rather than runs up against—the health restrictions. When I got to San Francisco, I found that the musicians were fantastically up for it despite the strange circumstances, and without exception navigated this new structure of music-making without a blink. For me, it was a joy to work directly with individuals, which, in a symphonic context, is nearly impossible with the usual model.” Reflecting on the innovative nature of Muhly’s work, Esa-Pekka Salonen comments, “Throughline is the sort of piece I came to the San Francisco Symphony to do. Screens, remote collaboration, and video communication were ubiquitous parts of our lives even before the pandemic. It’s natural that the Orchestra would begin to expand out of the concert hall and evolve new ways of presenting music to suit a visual, technologically-driven culture.”

Throughline consists of thirteen miniatures, with each movement highlighting a small ensemble of San Francisco Symphony musicians and eight of the movements featuring contributions from one of the Collaborative Partners. Adding to the unique nature of Throughline, the filming and recording of all the individual parts—in particular, of the Collaborative Partners—took place in various places around the US and the world. Pianist Nicholas Britell was filmed in Los Angeles, CA; classical singer Julia Bullock in Munich, Germany; flutist Claire Chase in New York, NY; guitarist Bryce Dessner in St-Pée-sur-Nivelle, France; violinist Pekka Kuusisto in Helsinki, Finland; and jazz bassist and vocalist Esperanza Spalding in Northern Oregon. Music Director Esa-Pekka Salonen was filmed, in part, in Finland, while composer and pianist Nico Muhly, who also served as conductor for the piece, was filmed at Davies Symphony Hall in San Francisco. Collaborative Partner Carol Reiley used OpenAI’s MuseNet technology to compose a movement for Throughline from Los Altos, CA, and Esperanza Spalding improvisationally composed her own performance.
